Obama Supporters Grab Wealth Before Tax Hike

Jim Sinegal, co-founder of Costco, supports President Obama’s rhetoric of shared sacrifice. But apparently sacrifice only goes so far. He and the Costco board voted to pay stockholders, including themselves a special $7 per share dividend this month to avoid the president’s new soak-the-rich taxes on investments and income.

According to The Wall Street Journal, getting the dividend now means avoiding a tax rate of up to 43.4% next year when the Bush tax cuts expire and when Obamacare taxes investments at 3.8%. Mr. Sinegal will be keep $4 million dollars more this year as a result. Sinegal has wealth to spare when Obama takes it. Do you?
