Are You in All-Payer Claim Database?

Sixteen states have All-Payer Claims Database laws, which require that health insurers, including employers that self-insure their employees, report every medical claim to the state health department. This means your every visit to the doctor’s office and every hospital stay is registered with the government in these 16 states…unless you pay cash.

But now one self-insured company has refused to comply with Vermont’s order to send patient claims data. The U.S. Supreme Court will rule on this important case in June of 2016. If the employer wins, many self-insured companies nationwide may also refuse to send data. This would be good news for patients and privacy!
