December 7, 2012

Healthcare Under Cyber Attack

On this Pearl Harbor Day, most people don’t know our health freedom is under cyber attack. Dr. Keith Smith, head of the Surgery Center of Oklahoma, says Obama’s computerized medical record mandate is forcing doctors to sell out to hospitals and become hospital employees.

He says hospitals are using the computerized system as a remote control over physicians. Doctors will or will not order tests and treatments according to hospital protocols. If they refuse, the hospital can knock them off the grid, and put them out of business. One flip of a switch and they can’t even write an order. The electronic medical record mandate was never about care. It’s all about control.