It's None of Their Business!

The fiscal cliff law contains a surprise: an incentive for doctors to build “clinical data registries.” If they agree to collect patient data for the government, they can opt out of other reporting requirements.

But they can only opt out if they gather data into government-approved registries, accessible to federal officials. And they don’t have to ask you because HIPAA allows this intrusion. The federal government can then monitor patients, doctors and hospitals. I expect cardiac registries, asthma registries, diabetes registries, genetic registries and more. The government thinks your data is their data --- and your health conditions are their business. I disagree.
