Big Government Barges In

Once government gets an inch into your life, they are happy to encroach a mile. On January 1st, California parents were forced to put their 'big kids' back into booster seats. Children under age eight or less than 4 feet, 9 inches must now sit in a booster seat. The old law let them out when the child reached age 6 or 60 pounds.

The children are not happy. Neither are the parents who must pay for the new booster seats and deal with their child's understandable anger. So in two years, what's to keep government from mandating booster seats up to age 10? Nothing. There is no end to the march of government encroachment unless citizens stand up and just say no.
