From Flexibility to Tyranny

Last month, the Obama administration said States will be given flexibility in designing their coverage options for health insurance. The first red flag should be the fact that the Federal government is allowing flexibility for the States. The second red flag should be the realization that a year from now they may change their mind.

Congress empowered the Secretary of Health and Human Services with sole control to allow or deny insurance benefits. That's not flexibility. That's tyranny. Flexibility is used now to calm the public and prevent an uprising. The public should not be fooled. Obamacare has empowered two so-called "death panels" to essentially ration access to care.

"HHS to give states more flexibility to implement health reform," press release, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, December 16, 2011.

Presented daily by Twila Brase, President, Citizens' Council for Health Freedom.
