January 22, 2015

Government Help Usually Means Government Hurt

Lawmakers often claim they are expanding government simply to help people. This dubious claim should be shut down at almost every turn. When government helps one person, it often must hurt at least one other person. The government never gives away anything except what it has first taken from someone else.

Furthermore, bureaucrats take a cut whenever they take and give away your money. So government help usually means government hurt. But when you give to another individual in need, a charitable organization or a corporate endeavor, you are not hurt and many people are helped. People claiming to expand government to help others are mostly trying to help themselves to your money -- and the votes needed to keep taking your money long into the future.

Presented daily by Twila Brase, President, Citizens’ Council for Health Freedom.

The Health Freedom Minute is now heard in 40 states: Mornings M-Th at AM1280 (The Patriot) in MN and 91.5 AM WHKC (FreedomFM) in OH, afternoons on American Family Radio, and daily on the Bott Radio Network.