HHS Hides Truth About Sham Threat

Two weeks ago, the federal government ignored Obamacare requirements. HHS was required to determine on January 1 whether states are prepared to operate the Obamacare exchanges – the electronic data-sharing connections between state agencies and the federal government that will expand Medicaid, put the middle class on government subsidized coverage and enable IRS tracking of everyone’s insurance status.

Here’s why they waived the law. The law requires HHS to build a federal exchange for states that refuse to connect their state data systems with the federal data systems, but guess what! They have no money to build the federal exchange. It’s a false threat and HHS doesn’t want the truth revealed.
