Nation's Largest Healthcare Database Under Construction

The Mayo Clinic’s 5 million medical records have been joined to UnitedHealth Group’s 44 million insurance claims to create “the nation’s largest and most comprehensive health care database.” Mayo’s CEO says they want to find out of all the money spent, what services add value to care.

He adds: “Ultimately, we as a country have to figure this out, so people can have access to high-quality care and it doesn’t bankrupt them or the country.”

This statement fails to recognize that “the country” getting involved in health care is the problem. If individuals were paying most bills and government wasn’t, cost would be manageable, and insurance would be inexpensive because it would only be for catastrophes.
