$3.8 Billion and Counting for Exchanges

The Obama administration has doled out $3.8 billion to state Obamacare exchanges. There are only 14 of them, and many of them fear the loss of funding on January 1, 2015. Imagine the cost to federal taxpayers if all the states had decided to establish these federal takeover centers. California is already setting aside $200 million in anticipation of the loss of funding. Minnesota’s exchange expects a $3 million deficit.

States that said no to Obama’s exchange don’t face financial crisis. Nor are they in the news having to explain why the exchange doesn’t work, or why the people’s data is not secure. Congress has refused to spend more. Thank them.
