You Will Lose Your Job Under Obamacare

The president wants Congress to increase the minimum wage to $9 an hour from its current $7.25 - a 24% increase. But Michael Saltsman from the Employment Policies Institute says people don't need a raise, they need a job. Sixty percent of people living below the poverty line didn't work last year. What will happen next year?

Obamacare requires employers with 50 or more workers to buy health insurance or pay a fine -- and Obamacare just made health insurance more expensive. Full-time is 30 hours or more under the law. How many employers will not only not increase wages, but cut hours or positions? Share your concerns with Congress.

"The $9 Minimum Wage That Already Exists," Michael Saltsman, The Wall Street Journal, February 14, 2013.

Presented daily by Twila Brase, President, Citizens' Council for Health Freedom.
