Doctors Don’t Work for Patients

Doctors are getting paid less and less. Patients don’t know this because patients no longer pay the bills. Health plans and government do. Health plans and government also tell doctors what they can and cannot do for patients. As one doctor told me, “If it’s not on the computer screen, I can’t do it.”

What does this mean? First, it means he who holds the gold makes the rules. That’s not you. Second, it means fewer young people will choose to become doctors just as the baby boomers need lots of them. Third, it means patients will have no advocate when they are sick. What would you pay for a doctor to really care for you? Start saving cash now so when you need one, you can make that choice.
