Obamacare Has A Coverage Gap

Obamacare has a coverage gap. The U.S. Supreme Court said states cannot be forced to expand Medicaid. Thus some people do not qualify for regular Medicaid – their income is too high – and do not qualify for taxpayer-funded exchange coverage because their income is too low.

One man making $800 a month was surprised by this reality. If he earned $108 more per month, federal taxpayers would pay his entire premium on the Obamacare exchange. He and others caught in this gap probably think Medicaid or Obamacare coverage will get them the care they want. They may be surprised to learn that they cannot access the medication, hospital or doctor they need. Many doctors are refusing Obamacare patients.
