The Quest for Health Care Happiness

The debates have barely mentioned Obamacare. But summer is coming. Fully one-fifth of the $6 billion that is expected to be spent on television and digital campaign advertising to voters is going to be devoted to Obamacare. One expert says voters are confused and uncomfortable with health care under Obamacare and looking for someone with a clear message as to what the answer is.

The answer begins with this fact: “He who holds the dollars makes the rules.” The quest for health care happiness begins with us. If we, the patients, want control, choice, privacy and affordability, we must own our own health insurance policies, switch to catastrophic insurance, and pay cash for routine and minor care.

“Onslaught of pro-, anti-Obamacare spots is waiting in the wings.” Harris Meyer, Modern Healthcare, March 5, 2016.
