Six Years of Unsettled Obamacare Law

March 23rd is the 6th anniversary of Obamacare. Let me first say how happy I am that there’s nothing settled about the law. No one’s happy. It’s still an issue. Twelve Obamacare Co-ops have failed. Exchange enrollment has stalled. People are refusing to sign up for Obamacare. The bailouts weren’t allowed. Health insurers are quitting the exchanges. And a new president is on the way.

This is all good news. But other more transformative parts of the law are moving rapidly forward behind the scenes, particularly at the clinical care level. Stay tuned this week to learn why the Affordable Care Act must be repealed to protect patients and the ethical practice of medicine.
