Defiance on Obamacare

What if the Supreme Court rules Obamacare constitutional? That’s the question a legislator asked me during my testimony. I reminded him that one of the founding fathers once said that decisions of constitutionality could not be left in the hands of six men in black robes.

I told him what Virginia Attorney General, Ken Cuccinelli, recently told POLITICO. He suggests states could obstruct implementation by simply refusing to lift a finger. He said there are no criminal penalties and said it would become a power struggle.

In fact, South Dakota is already defying the law. They have issued regulations that directly violate the Obamacare ban on denying coverage to children with pre-existing conditions. So far the National Guard hasn’t been called in.

“Cuccinelli: States might not comply with ACA,” J. Lester Feder, POLITICO, March 5, 2012.
