March 2, 2016

Push For National Patient ID Accelerates

Hillary Clinton wanted a national patient ID card, which would have meant “No card, No care.” HIPAA then required it, but Congressman Ron Paul prohibited its funding. Then a federal law required “creditors” to ask for IDs, and federal officials tried to designate doctors and hospitals as creditors, but a 2010 law clarified they aren’t. Yet some clinics haven’t got the message and still ask for your ID.

Now the Obama administration is pushing REAL ID, a national ID card that could become a national patient ID. And a former bureaucrat just called for a National Health Safety Identifier, which is just another name for a national patient ID. Whatever they call it, it’s all the same. Just say no.

“Protect your patients, protect your practice: What you need to know about the Red Flags Rule,” American Medical Association (found at Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services), no date.

Presented daily by Twila Brase, President, Citizens’ Council for Health Freedom.

The Health Freedom Minute is now heard in 41 states: Mornings M-Th at AM1280 (The Patriot) in MN and 91.5 AM WHKC (FreedomFM) in OH, afternoons on American Family Radio, and daily on the Bott Radio Network.