March 7, 2014

So How is This Fair?

Let’s talk about fairness. Look at who pays for Obamacare coverage. The Wall Street Journal reports some people in rural Georgia have premiums twice as high as in urban Atlanta. But “few residents seem to notice” because “Most are receiving a high enough subsidy for coverage that they don’t care.” They don’t care because they aren’t paying the bill.

One man has a policy with a $2,500 deductible that costs $917 a month. But he only pays $182. Taxpayers pay the other 80 percent. So taxpayers are hit twice. They pay for their own insurance, and then they pay for Obamacare coverage obtained by others. How fair does this feel to you?