Obamacare’s NATIONAL Exchange

Despite all assertions otherwise, under Obamacare, there are no state exchanges. There is also no federal exchange. There’s only one exchange, the national exchange. The so-called state exchanges are just portals, or websites, into the national exchange. The feds will use those portals to control the States.

Every state portal is connected to Obama’s central federal data hub. Individuals enter data into the state portal. The data hub sends it to five federal agencies for tagging, tracking and enforcement. The federal exchange is just a federal portal for people without state portals. Our diagram explaining the National bureaucracy is now online.
