The Dangerous EHR

More than 80 percent of physicians in an online survey say electronic health records impede care. 47% say they endanger patient safety.

One doctor wrote, “I have made more errors since our conversion to the EHR than in the 38 years previous.” Another complained of being 30% less efficient. One consultant said mistakes can’t be deleted, just hidden. And in Dallas, specialists can no longer go to any hospital because the record systems differ and they’d have to be trained for each one.

So why are so many Republicans and Democrats committed to computerized medical records? Because your data can be used to control your doctors to cut the cost of care. You should be very worried.
