Judges and DOJ Take Aim & Fire

A week ago, President Obama took a swing at the Supreme Court justices. He said it would be an “unprecedented” case of “judicial activism” to undo Obamacare. In other words, he pre-accused the Court of playing politics.

One federal judge was not pleased. During a court hearing last week he demanded that the attorney arguing for the U.S. government produce a three-page letter explaining why federal courts are authorized to overturn unconstitutional laws. Last Thursday, Attorney General Eric Holder sent the judge a letter that did nothing of the sort. Instead it argued that the Judiciary is to presume that Acts of Congress are constitutional.
