Your Employer May be Forced to Ask a Personal Question

This year, new business regulations for federal contractors will cause bosses to ask workers a very personal question: "Are you disabled?" That's because the federal government decided any federal contractor that doesn't employ at least 7 percent disabled workers, could face penalties, including loss of federal contracts.

Six years ago, Congress decided to categorize many Americans as disabled who may disagree with the term. The new meaning of "disabled" includes people with cancer, diabetes, major depression, epilepsy and obsessive-compulsive disorder to name a few. Do you want to divulge these things to your employer? You don't have to. They have to ask but you don't have to tell.

"Are You Disabled? Now Your Boss Wants to Know," Lauren Weber, The Wall Street Journal, March 19, 2014.

Presented daily by Twila Brase, President, Citizens' Council for Health Freedom.

The Health Freedom Minute is now heard in 41 states: Mornings M-Th at AM1280 (The Patriot) in MN and 91.5 AM WHKC (FreedomFM) in OH, afternoons on American Family Radio, and daily on the Bott Radio Network.
