Refuse to Enable Health Disparities Agenda

Researchers say lesbian, gay and bisexual patients, “are not afforded the same access to health-protection resources including prestige, power and supportive social connections,” and thus experience more barriers to care. So, how is it that people with low incomes receive plenty of care?

Researchers blame doctors for this situation, saying, “patients who feel judged by providers are less likely to seek out care, including … flu shots.” Well, take action. To protect your health freedom, do your best to disrupt this dangerous agenda to conjure up civil rights violations in the exam room. Refuse to identify your gender, sexual orientation, race or ethnicity on clinic questionnaires.
