Young Doctors Bad-Mouth Obamacare

Remember when a bunch of doctors in white coats stood next to President Obama supporting Obamacare? Two years later, a different story has emerged from a new survey of 500 physicians under the age of 40. Most of them are bad-mouthing the law.

Forty-nine percent believe it will have a negative impact on their practice. Only 23 percent think the impact will be positive. Thirty percent said they’re “highly pessimistic” about the future of the U.S. health care system while only four percent claim optimism. One of the so-called optimistic said, “it can’t get any worse.” You wanna bet? Let’s hope the Supreme Court puts an end to it.

“Young doctors give bad diagnosis on impact of health reform,” Kathryn Smith, POLITICO Pro, April 12, 2012.
