Why We Must Restore Freedom to Practice of Medicine

The Obama administration is rapidly issuing new payment policies to change the way your doctor practices. The electronic health record is key to making it happen. These experiments in patient care, such as bundled payments and alternative payment models, are taking place in Medicare through programs and mandates established by and tracked under Obamacare.

As a result, today’s doctors are being conditioned to obey outside directives. Because you don’t pay the bill, they’re checking boxes, reporting your data without your consent, and following computerized treatment protocols just to get paid. We’d do well to restore freedom to the practice of medicine before doctors lose the ability to care for patients with ethical integrity and personalized dignity.
