Why Our Health Care Costs More

New Obamacare enrollees are sicker, says a new Blue Cross study. They have higher rates of diseases such as diabetes, depression and HIV. They received more medical services than those enrolled before Obamacare began. And they had more hospital admissions, outpatient visits, emergency room visits and prescriptions.

These new enrollees also cost more, a lot more, with expenses averaging 19 percent higher than those in the Blue Cross BlueShield employer-based group plans. One statistic was particularly telling. While there was only a 24 percent increase in people with high blood pressure, there was a 242 percent increase in people with HIV. Is it any wonder our costs are higher?
