Refusing to Answer the Question

Last week I listened to an interesting federal press conference out of Washington D.C. regarding Obamacare's government health insurance exchanges – the state-based federal takeover centers.

It was particularly interesting because one health official refused to answer a reporter's question. The reporter wanted to know whether states will have to give back to the feds the millions of dollars in exchange grants that the feds have given them if Obamacare is overturned. The official ignored the question even when the reporter asked it again. Instead the official simply said, "We believe the law is going to be upheld." That is not an answer. The public deserves a better answer regarding the use of their tax dollars.
