Feds Issue Biosurveillance Strategy

Now we know why our last two presidents pushed for computerized medical records, with Obama mandating them by next year. It began with 9/11 followed by mandated creation of a National Health Security Strategy. The Strategy proposes broad federal access to your electronic medical records for biosurveillance, tracking and research.

Despite assertions otherwise, the Strategy has little to do with protecting you from bioterrorism or pandemics. The plan is to track and analyze you all year long. The Strategy also supports universal health care to keep you healthy and resilient. States are not required to comply. Tell state legislators to pass a bill prohibiting implementation of the Strategy in your state.

Public Law No 109-417.
