Disabling the Disabled

The federal agency which enforces the Americans with Disabilities Act, may soon make it more difficult for employers to hire the disabled. The agency may require employers to allow the disabled to take indefinite leaves of absence. It may also not allow employers to fire the disabled for inappropriate actions. Employers may be required to determine if the disability caused the behavior. And it may make employers honor a telecommuting request.

All of this will make the disabled less employable, and more of a risk to hire. Without work, the disabled will have less money and more difficulty getting insurance. When bureaucrats say they’re here to help, it’s time to put on your running shoes.
