$8.35 Billion to Obama's Campaign

Obamacare cut the Medicare Advantage program by $145 billion. But at the end of 2010, the Medicare administration provided $8.35 billion dollars for a Medicare Advantage Bonus Payment demonstration project.

According to the GAO, this funding is seven times higher than any Medicare project in the last 12 years. The GAO dinged the administration saying the project doesn’t allow credible evaluation of its effectiveness, because all insurers get bonuses. The Wall Street Journal denounces the project as an election ploy. Indeed. The money infusion that covers up 71% of the Obamacare cuts declines sharply after the election.
