Exciting News for the Deaf

I’m going to talk about something that’s extremely exciting. Joanne Milne, a British woman who was born deaf, received cochlear implants in late February. After a month, her speech therapist turned them on and they worked. For the first time in 39 years, Ms. Milne heard sound.

You can watch this extraordinary video moment online. The therapist says the days of the week to her and Ms. Milne breaks down in tears of joy, again and again. World magazine reports that this breakthrough came through just in time. The rare condition that caused her to be deaf started taking away her sight 10 years ago. Watch the video and be amazed at how health care technology has changed somebody’s world.
