Take Frederic Bastiat’s Wise Advice on Obamacare

Frederic Bastiat wrote a little book called “The Law” in 1850 to counter the slide toward socialism in France. We need it now. The law, he says, is the “collective organization of the individual right to lawful defense” of his person, his liberty, and his property. Thus, the law cannot be used to destroy the person, liberty or property of others.

But perversion of the law happens when it’s used to legalize plunder, which is what happens when the law takes from some persons what belongs to them and gives it to others to whom it does not belong. When that happens, Mr. Bastiat says “abolish this law without delay.” Thus, following Mr. Bastiat’s wise advice, we must repeal Obamacare without delay.
