Data Discrepancies Loom Larger for Obamacare

At least 2 million of the 8 million Obamacare enrollees may be ineligible for Obamacare. There are data discrepancies in their applications. They may not qualify for coverage or for the federal premium subsidies they’re receiving. The administration must certify eligibility but the Obamacare data systems to do so aren’t even built.

So what does this mean? First, despite Obama’s claims otherwise, it means that Obamacare is not working. Second, it means that a whole bunch of people may have to pay back a whole bunch of money to the IRS in 2015. This is not exactly the stuff of dreams if you’re a Democrat hoping to get elected as President in 2016.
