Go Direct and Pay Less

Dr. John Gerguis, a Georgia physician has converted his practice to the Direct Primary Care model. Patients pay a monthly fee to get unlimited medical care at the office which includes two physicians and one nurse practitioner -- and 24/7 access to Dr. Gerguis.

Some services like labs, x-rays, medications and specialty referrals require additional payment but at a fraction of the typical cost and patients can submit them to their insurer.

“The goal is to spend less on medical care yet obtain a higher level of service,” said one news article. In the future the clinic hopes to offer home and work-site visits. Consider Direct Primary Care if you want cost-savings and personal attention.
