The Truth about California's ACA Premiums

California's state-funded health insurance exchange, Covered California, released their rates and claimed that the cost of exchange coverage is much lower than expected. Supporters of Obamacare cheered. Well not so fast.

First of all, they mixed apples and oranges comparing individual prices to small employer prices. Second, the prices are about double what an individual can buy today in California using ehealthinsurance.com. Third, the policies provide fewer choices of doctors and hospitals. A consumer group is already criticizing the coverage saying the networks are too limited and the costs too high. So much for the agency's attempt at spinning the sticker shock out of the rates.
