Obama Lawmaking by Rulemaking

Some say 90 percent of our laws are written by unelected federal bureaucrats in the form of regulations. In 2016, new regulations are being imposed at a rate of one “every two hours and 24 minutes” says the Competitive Enterprise Institute. Federal regulations cost Americans $1.9 trillion each year – or about $15,000 per U.S. household.

Regulators in 60 agencies have some 3,300 regulations still in the pipeline to be imposed. The Obama administration was the first in American history to generate more than 80,000 pages of regulations in a single year and they’ve done it three times. The next president should rescind these regulations, not add to them.

“Feds Publish Over 2,000 Pages of New Regs in ONE WEEK,” Ryan Young, Daily Caller (Competitive Enterprise Institute), June 1, 2016.
