Billions in Obamacare Subsidies in Question

The Obama administration has paid health plans $3 billion in Obamacare subsidies without any verification that the subsidies were for the right people or the right amounts. A federal auditor says the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services has no internal controls to ensure accuracy of payments or eligibility of recipients.

Instead, the government is relying on health plans to tell them how much the government owes in subsidy payments for Obamacare enrollees. Only the government would hand out our hard-earned dollars with such impunity. This failure to verify eligibility underscores the fact that the administration never planned to build or fund a federal exchange, and still lacks a basic system for financial accountability.
