Real Life Exposes Obamacare Realities

I love real life. There can be all sorts of claims and promises and then real life happens. Obama promised that family premiums would go down by $2,500 during his first term. It never happened because the Affordable Care Act made health insurance more expensive. Liberals hail premium subsidies but that's just robbing Peter to pay Paul, meaning less dollars for other purchases by taxpayers and more difficulty surviving for some businesses.

Take the California restaurant that added a 4 percent surcharge to everyone's bill to help to pay for employee coverage. One customer said he cut the waiter's tip when he saw the surcharge. So, more of his money went to insurers and less to the waiter. That's how real life exposes Obamacare realities.
