Baby DNA Snatching

In 2003, our organization, Citizens’ Council for Health Freedom, discovered state governments keeping the DNA of newborns for research without parent consent. Our efforts led to lawsuits in Texas and Minnesota. The states were forced to destroy the newborn DNA they had in storage -- 5.2 million DNA samples in Texas -- and to get parent consent in the future.

Now a new Mississippi law requires hospitals to keep DNA of babies born to mothers age 16 or younger so officials can look for statutory rape by matching the child’s DNA with men in the state’s DNA database. The mothers have no say in the matter. DNA is private property. The Mississippi law should be repealed.
