Realities of Obamacare

For the next five days, I’ll talk about four Obamacare failures. These implementation delays point to at least two realities. First, the law is clearly unworkable. The Obamacare infrastructure is not yet able to function. And second, the president thinks it’s perfectly fine to break the law by ordering his administration to ignore deadlines and requirements if doing so fits his political agenda.

Just try to claim such flexibility for paying taxes past the April 15 deadline. You’ll be fined for violation of the law. Obama thinks the law is his to break. He is wrong. Republicans should use these failures to delay and then repeal the law. Listen tomorrow for failure #1.
