Colorado Expects Boatload of Obamacare Drops Out

The implosion is beginning. Last month the finance committee for Colorado’s exchange met. The staff told them 22 percent of Obamacare enrollees will drop out next year – twice the number they’d estimated just two months earlier. This means a loss of nearly three-quarter million dollars in revenue.

To help shore up its finances, Colorado is imposing a one dollar and 25 cents tax on everyone in the state with health insurance. They may also raise the administrative fee up to 3 percent for every policy sold through the exchange. All federal exchange funding disappears at the end of this year. No doubt, that’s making Colorado very nervous.

“Colorado exchange expects more to drop health coverage.” Arthur Kane, Denver Post, July 8, 2014.
