Health Plan Profits Come From Government Programs

The five largest health plans are looking for merger partners among themselves. Such consolidation could mean higher premiums for all. With the highest Medicare Advantage population, Humana is a lucrative target. Why? Because, as The Wall Street Journal reports, “Growth opportunities in the insurance sector are increasingly limited to government programs.”

In short, health plan profits come from Medicare, Medicaid and Obamacare, which are all funded primarily by taxpayers. Managed care companies, in control of health care due to the ACA are reaping profits from the Obamacare mandate. Imagine how they’d profit if we were all forced into government coverage.
