Amazing Medicaid Factoid

Since the Supreme Court ruled that States cannot be forced to expand Medicaid, at least eight Governors have declined. This is the right decision. Rather than being a program for the poor as it began in 1965, it has morphed closer and closer to a middle-class entitlement adding 16-20 million more people to the dole if all governors expand the program.

Here’s an incredible factoid. In 1965, there were 17.9 workers for every Pennsylvania resident on Medicaid. Today there are 2.5 workers for every recipient. The administration plans to socialize the country by expanding welfare. Hospitals want the cash and are lobbying governors to say yes. They should just say no.
