$18,000 Broken Promise

President Obama once promised that his health plan would reduce family insurance premiums by $2500. Louisiana Governor Bobby Jindal wrote last week about that broken promise. Since 2008, when the promise was made, Americans have faced a cumulative total of more than $18,000 per family in higher costs.

Overall, across the nation, that’s $1.2 trillion in higher premiums. Imagine what we as a country could do if we not only didn’t lose that $1.2 trillion dollars, but if each family also were paying $2,500 less in coverage. Jindal calls for a full repeal of the law and tells Americans it’s time to turn Obamacare in for a new model of health care.
