Let’s Repeal the EHR Mandate

The only ones happy about the electronic health record mandate are government and health plan snoops and the data industry now swimming in taxpayer dollars. Sixty-eight percent of doctors say they’ve lost money and their productivity has taken a hit. Sixty-four percent say it takes longer to write their notes and 34% say reviewing patient information requires more time.

Remember when they claimed EHRs would cut health care costs by $77 billion? It was a lie. Taxpayers have paid $36 billion to enrich the data industry, raise costs, endanger patients, end privacy, hobble doctors, and enable government and corporate health surveillance. Let’s repeal the EHR mandate.
