Forget the "Collapse on its Own" Obamacare Theory

National Review’s Ramesh Ponurru says D.C. Conservatives and Republicans are embracing a dangerous theory that Obamacare will collapse of its own weight. He says “Republicans will have to do more than just wait for it to go away” and more than they’ve done already. Considering all the Republican leaders around the country publicly or covertly expanding Medicaid or implementing Obama’s exchange, this is true. Only six or seven GOP-led states are saying No and No.

Ramesh warns us to expect dramatic failures in the first year but says the law won’t self-destruct. The Democrats are prepared to blame conservatives and head for a single-payer system. He chides Republicans for not creating an alternative. He’s so right.
