What if Insurers are Deemed Too Big to Fail?

What happens if health care corporations are deemed “too big to fail”? Your tax dollars will bail them out of their financial woes. Already, the five largest health insurers are vying to merge into three companies. Obamacare destroyed their competition, essentially creating public utilities which are now fighting for the protection of “too big to fail” status.

In addition, 20 percent of all hospitals in the U.S. are expected to seek a merger by 2020, creating huge health systems that could be deemed “too big to fail.” Your tax dollars are at stake and because you’ll have fewer options, you may have to travel farther for care and they’ll be able to charge higher prices. This is the Affordable Care Act at work.
