August 2, 2013

It's Not Breaking the Law

I’ve been talking to a lot of reporters lately about our Refuse to Enroll campaign. Most of them tell me our organization is encouraging people to break the law. That’s when I have to explain to them the U.S. Supreme Court decision. The Court said we all have a constitutional right NOT to buy health insurance. We have a right not to be covered. That means we have a legal right to refuse to enroll in government Exchange coverage.

There are three ways to comply with Obamacare: get coverage, pay the tax for not being covered, or file for one of nine exemptions. It’s perfectly legal to refuse to buy insurance or enroll in government exchanges. It’s the law. Refuse to enroll.