Taking the Shine Off Obama's Spin

The Obama administration claims 8 million enrollees through Healthcare.gov. First of all, no one has any idea if that number is accurate. But second of all, other numbers take the shine off the administration’s spin job. I’ll share three.

Number one, 2.6 million of the 8 million enrollees have data discrepancies that cannot be resolved. They may not even be eligible. Number 2, there have been 1 million transactions since the end of open enrollment, but half had nothing to do with enrollment. They could be dis-enrollments, but the Obama administration isn’t talking. And finally, the number of people with employer-sponsored coverage has dropped by a whooping 1.7 million people. So much for the Obama spin.
