Who's Your Doctor Working For?

Nearly 62 percent of physicians surveyed say Obamacare has had a negative impact on patient care. More than 54 percent say Obamacare has negatively impacted their ability to make treatment decisions.

That's because government and health plans use data in your computerized medical records to rate your treatment outcomes, which have less to do with your doctor than with your choices, lifestyle and genetics. They also score physician compliance with one-size-fits-all treatment protocols embedded in computerized medical records. Using these scores, and patient satisfaction surveys, your doctors receive bonuses or penalties. So, is your doctor working for you, the government or your health plan?
